A Note from Coach Clarke

After completing the dual-purpose curriculum (evaluate the University and the Soccer program) you will know if attending and playing soccer at WU is something you want to pursue.

Here is how this happens. The meeting with an Admissions representative will highlight the extensive opportunities offered by WU. Living in the dorms will provide a taste for University housing. The round table with present players will shed light on balancing the demands of soccer, academics and social life. Interacting with fellow campers will give you an impression of potential future classmates. During camp you will assess the soccer program as you interface with the coaching staff and men's soccer team members. The coaching staff will provide you with your projected role within the team, should you apply, be admitted and choose to attend Washington University.

The camp has become our most successful recruiting method. After the four days on campus and playing soccer, many are sold on Washington University and apply early or regular decision. In fact, this past season there were 12 former campers active on our varsity or junior varsity teams. We invite you to join us this summer and experience what attracts so many to pursue the University and the soccer program.

Please call me if you have any questions.

 Joe Clarke

Testimonials

Thank you for inviting me to camp and providing feedback. I now have a better understanding of college life as both a student and an athlete. I enjoyed meeting some of the players. I am now convinced Washington U and your soccer program are a really good fit for me.

—Michael W., Texas

“I really enjoyed myself and am even more interested in the school and soccer program. After the campus tour and the round table talk with the players, I now have a good sense of what it is like to attend your university.”

—Jimmy B., Illinois

“The camp was ideal for getting seen . . . to meet other recruits and to get a feel for the program and the school as a whole.”

—Elie Zenner, Senior Captain and 2 time All Central Region Selection,
 2007 Academic All American, Illinois

From Camp to Washington University Soccer Team

The 2011 Washington University men's soccer team centered off in the second round of the NCAA soccer tournament featuring five starters whom had participated in our showcase camp. These Washington University student athletes used the camp to assess the university and the soccer program while the coaching staff determined their fit within the team. Interest in studying at the university is nationwide and many desire to play collegiate soccer while here. The camp proves to be the best way to bring prospective student athletes, the coaches and the university together for mutual evaluation.
